

Draft code goes to council

On May 11, 2011 – four years after Philadelphia voters approved a ballot question authorizing the zoning reform effort – the ZCC voted 22 to 0 with seven abstentions to send the Preliminary Report to City Council. Despite a heated debate on when and how the code should become effective, the required two-thirds vote was reached by a majority of members who believe the draft code is ready for City Council input.
